

Trial Introduction

We are pleased to confirm that your free trial is now set up.

You can reach the Taylor and Francis journals platform on the following link:

<https://www.tandfonline.com>

- The attached documents list the titles in the libraries you are trialling. This list includes quick link URLs which will take you directly to each of the journals on Taylor and Francis Online. You can also make a word search.
- We are available to give some basic training on how to use the site. Please reach out to us to arrange this. It can be recorded and saved for others to view. (via Microsoft Teams)
- We aim to check things are working for you on day 3 of the trial and will send you the usage statistics a month after the end of the trial.
- Access to our content is provided via your institution's IP addresses therefore there should be no requirement to login to the site to browse your trial content.

The name of your institution should be displayed at the top of the Taylor & Francis Online page (“Access provided by..” your institutional name) when the site recognizes that you are on your institution's network.

If at any time you are prompted to purchase content this would indicate that the product in question is not included as part of the trial. If in doubt, please contact us for further information.

Please promote the trial to your users, so they can assess the content for potential future subscription.

Useful links:

Librarian Resources: <https://librarianresources.taylorandfrancis.com>

Journal Collections: <https://librarianresources.taylorandfrancis.com/product-info/journals>

Digital Resources: <https://librarianresources.taylorandfrancis.com/product-info/digital-products>

Author Services: <https://authorservices.taylorandfrancis.com>

Author Events: <https://authorservices.taylorandfrancis.com/events>

Taylor & Francis Online Help and Support Centre: <https://help.tandfonline.com/s/>

If you experience any issues that cannot be resolved by consulting the support pages on the above link, please contact us for further assistance at support@tandfonline.com